Re-envisioning the work of Reggio Emilia Provocations

As Reggio Emilia Provocations moves into its next phase, we are re-envisioning the way we support early childhood educators across Aotearoa New Zealand. While professional learning opportunities have been a central part of our work in the past, our future focus will shift toward making New Zealand research, thinking and practice more visible and accessible to the sector.

We aim to showcase examples of innovative practice and highlight research from Aotearoa New Zealand that resonates with the values that have made the Reggio Emilia approach internationally respected. Our work will foreground areas such as democracy, collaborative practice, the environment, the arts and inquiry-based approaches to education. Through this shift, we hope to strengthen dialogue within our community and support practitioners to see how these ideas live within Te Whāriki and the unique cultural and educational context of Aotearoa New Zealand.

We look forward to sharing more about this evolving direction at our AGM.
