The voices of children? These wonderful and sweet words that can afflict the youngest citizens with so much good will. What can we mean with listening to voices of children? What is the quality of this ambition? Its biggest contribution is that the children confront us and remind us of the necessary attitude of questioning as a contribution every human can give to humanity. No child has been born to exemplify a theory of children - or even humanity. What the voices of children foremost express, is their not convinced question - WHY! This is the existential question of anybody that has not yet been ordered. Why? This revolutionary question that threatens and challenges all that is taken for granted and what we name culture.
